A Navy Seal fights against the waves of enemies in Iraq in a world of chaos. See behind-the-scenes footage and learn the techniques he uses to dominate the battlefield. Then witness firsthand the heroics of Navy Seals as they deal with insurmountable odds. Sniper teams have long held a special place in our military heritage. And after 9/11 and the start of the war in Afghanistan, snipers were needed. It was a need David Ian Gray fulfilled, along with a group of soldiers called Team ALPHA. Gray was eventually promoted to sniper. But at the battle of Shikhuzaï, in which Gray himself was present, he was hit several times and died. On October 1st, 2002, Gray was one of only two US soldiers who've ever died during a sniper battle. His wife, son and mother were at his graveside that day. Gray saw a void in the national psyche that Americans were not honoring their own sacrifices. Today, he sees a comfort with his son's wedding, being proud of his son, of his family. He'd like to see the country get the right history of his life. What he wanted was a monument to talk about sacrifice, tell the story of the war in Afghanistan, and his life. Edit: And yes, David Ian Gray died in Afghanistan. Sniper, APO, AE, APO AE, Murph, Davis, Murph, Murph, Sniper, APO, AE, Davis 3e33713323
