It has an intuitive interface, which makes the process easy and hassle-free. The program doesn't force you to write or copy text on the spot and decrypts it directly from the clipboard. Actually, you can paste texts from the Internet and the process won't even require you to enter a password. But what does it offer in terms of protection? Cryptostyler's security is based on a well-known algorithm: it encrypts data with Blowfish. You can vary the encryption strength, depending on the password you're using, although it doesn't offer encrypted files or password-protected documents. Even so, the result is still unreadable, so you can't even imagine how it would be possible to recover the original text. In order to decrypt your data, you'll need to enter the exact password used to encrypt it. Once the process is done, you can hide your passwords or share them with other people. Although the program has been developed for Windows, it was recently adapted to Mac users, after receiving some support from its developer. The tool is easy to use, simple to install and offers a lot of features. It's also usable by people who are not tech-savvy and haven't a clue what to do with complex software. In order to make your life easier, the developers provide a step-by-step guide and a lot of detailed explanations. In fact, Cryptostyler is a good alternative to Cipher Text because it uses the exact same algorithm and you can get the exact same results as the former. If you want to try the tool, it's 100% compatible with Windows XP, Windows Vista, Windows 7, Windows 8/8.1 and Windows 10. It's not available for Mac, however. In this article, you will learn about a fantastic and affordable solution to encrypt and decrypt any text you type into a document using an encryption algorithm. Although the Internet is the place to easily gather most types of information, it's not really a secure place, depending where you wander off. Even conversations can be at risk, but there are methods to increase security. For instance, Cipher Text is the type of application which can make your text strings unreadable until deciphered. Paste source text or write it on the spot. On the bright side of things, the application doesn't take you through a setup process to make its features available, so you can just as well use it directly from a thumb drive on the computer you need to. Note, however, that it depends on .NET Framework to function, so you might first want to make sure it's installed. All it has to offer is found in a pretty compact window, but doesn't keep you busy with the accommodation process, because functions are in plain sight, organized in an intuitive manner. There's a large text pad to paste or write your source text, as well as available options found in a clean menu bar. Encryption based on a custom password. Launching the application for the first time brings up a prompt, asking you to provide a password, which is best to remember, because it's the only way to be able to decrypt text later on. This prevents others from deciphering encrypted text strings. In case you're not satisfied with the original key, you can change it later on, but it doesn't work for strings encrypted with different passwords. Unfortunately, the application doesn't come with support for external files, so text string either needs to be written on the spot, or pasted from the clipboard. The same goes for saving, operation which also depends on the clipboard. In conclusion. Taking everything into consideration, we can state that Cipher Text is a pretty straightforward encryption tool. Sadly, you can't target a file, even if plain text, and the algorithm used in the process doesn't really make you feel safe, even if the result is unreadable. What's New In Cipher Text?

Cipher Text is a text encryption application that was developed with the intention of fooling others, while still being easy to use. This is done by encrypting text strings with a custom password that's unique to each encrypted text. This is its only real advantage over most of the other encryption software that are out there. Utility Value: Very limited. Useful for people who want to encrypt and decrypt text on the go, in chat, or whatever, but this might not be a great application to use if you want to work on important confidential files.
