More than 2,000 health workers, including some from the WHO, at seven hospitals in three of China's most heavily-affected provinces are under quarantine due to possible contact with the coronavirus. China is carrying out an unprecedented scale up of its containment measures. It appears to be turning the tide, but it remains unclear how many infections have been contained. The epidemic has spread from the first case to more than three dozen nations and territories. The WHO has said it expects the virus to reach every corner of the world. Italy has the most confirmed cases in Europe with more than 27,000 and global concern is rising that the virus could overwhelm the medical systems of hard-hit countries like South Korea, Italy, Iran and Mexico. A coronavirus outbreak is raging at a seafood and meat market in China's central Hubei province that has killed at least 33 people and sickened 898, state news agency Xinhua said on Tuesday, citing the provincial health commission. The death toll from the virus outbreak in China was 30 as of Monday, and the number of confirmed cases rose to more than 1,200, it said. Of the new cases, 134 were found in one cluster at a fish and wild animal market in the city of Wuhan, Xinhua said, while almost all of the rest were in and around the city of Shenzhen. Among the cases in Wuhan were 11 who e79caf774b
